War Spreads Into Balkans As Italy Opens Attack On Greeks

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

In a military sense, America is rapidly mobilizing for national defense.

R Day has come and gone. Plans for the mobilization of men are proceeding swiftly and smoothly. And despite the seditious activities of communists and other un-American forces during recent years, designed to undermine the patriotism and loyalty of American youth, there has been little or no resistance to the draft on the part of young men who will do the fighting if this nation is drawn into the vortex of war.

American men of military age, it is indicated, are still loyal to their country and still willing to die for it, if need be, just as they have been in every crisis in American history. There is something so fundamental in that kind of loyalty to one's country that the first bugle call in time of danger re-awakens it, despite all the bitter differences of peace time and all the propaganda of foreign emissaries.

There is another aspect of America's national defense program, however, which concerns agriculture and industry and the working men and women in our great productive system—and there is desperate need that attention be given to this phase of the defense program.

It is this writer's opinion that the young men of America will have no need to fight for America—if the workers of America, young and old, employers and employees alike, are willing to WORK FOR AMERICA. This country can be made so strong that the mad men of Europe, bent on world conquest, will pull up short—stopped by the realization that America's production machine, with the American people working in harmony, can withstand and defeat any military machine on the face of the globe.

But billions for defense are not enough. There must be sweat and toil for defense. Millions of loyal, able-bodied, well-trained young men in army and navy uniforms are not enough. There must be farms turning out produce; factories turning out equipment; shipyards turning out ships. There must be a supply line that no enemy power, within or without, can break or demoralize. There must be millions of men in overalls willing to work, just as there must be millions in uniform willing to fight!

For the past eight or ten years, this country has followed false gods; it has listened to those who declared that America's period of growth and achievement was ended; it has killed little pigs and it has plowed under its crops; it has turned an attentive ear to the defeatist gospel that we should divide what we have, instead of producing what we want; it has learned to beg for government subsidies, because government leaders taught that begging was patriotic—and that producing was wasteful and unsound economy.

We slowed down our industrial machine; we produced less for more; we limited the hours of labor; we divided the work, subsidized youth to keep it in school and out of the labor market; we spent billions for unemployment, but little or nothing to stimulate production and make new employment; we retired the aged on government pensions to get them out of the labor market sooner; we chased "something for nothing" rainbows and learned to talk about "the economy of scarcity."

We forgot the simple truth that

Motor Parts Store In New Location

The Placerville Motor Parts store, established six years ago by S. E. Price in the lower Fairchild Building, is being moved to a new location at the corner of Coloma and Main Streets, formerly occupied by the Placerville postoffice.

Mr. Price notes that the new location is nearer a greater number of auto service agencies of the community, and that the general plan of the store building provides for a departmental arrangement of stock which will mark an advancement in the service features of the business.

Although the store was open for business Monday morning, Mr. Price indicated it will be several days before the moving operation is concluded.

DRIVER HELD, 3 INJURED IN CRASH

Camino Family Victims In Wreck On Saturday; Reckless Driving Charged

In a surprise appearance in Court Monday afternoon, Walter Charles pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and was fined $300 with 150 days in jail as the alternative. Eddie Oliver pleaded guilty to being drunk on a public highway and was fined $20 with ten days in jail as the alternative. Both men were arraigned before Justice of the Peace T. F. Lewis and both were returned to jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Pearce, of Camino, and their small daughter, Carolyn, were victims in an automobile accident Saturday for which Walter Charles, 33, is held at the county jail under charges of reckless driving involving personal injury.

Two others riding with Charles were jailed over the weekend and Monday morning in justice court Frank Berlin, 52, pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk on a public highway and was fined $10 which he paid.

Eddie Oliver, 32, the second passenger in the car, denied his guilt of the same charge and a hearing was set for Tuesday which was also the day set for further hearing for Charles, who pleaded not guilty.

4-H Workers Get Project Pins

Achievement Night Held Saturday At Missouri Flat Honors 71 Members

Seventy-one 4-H Club members of the county received pins signifying the completion of their project work during the past year at the annual Achievement Night meeting, held Saturday at the Missouri Flat Community hall.

E. Ogden Hook, county key banker, presented the pins to those of the 4-H members who were present who had earned them. There were a number of pins presented to proxies as a result of the illness of some of the 4-H members.

Woodbridge Metcalf, extension forester, and his assistant, Ralph Waltz, were in attendance and assisted with the program, which also included community singing and the offering of stunts and demonstrations by the various 4-H Clubs.

Mr. And Mrs. Jones Home From Trip To Midwest

Chief of Police and Mrs. Ralph Jones returned during the weekend from a visit in the mid-west, driving home in a new Packard five-passenger coupe of which Mrs. Jones took delivery at Detroit.

In accompanying Mrs. Jones east, Mr. Jones had thought that he would spend some time in the interest of his health at Hot Springs, Arkansas, but owing to sudden illness found it necessary to forego the trip from Omaha to Hot Springs and spent several days under treatment at the home of his son, in Omaha, while the son accompanied Mrs. Jones to Detroit to take delivery of the car.

COUNTY CONSCRIPTION TOTAL CLIMBS TO 1,639 MONDAY

Men Listed For Draft May Volunteer For One-Year Enlistments Expressing Their Preference As To Service, Office States

The total of men registered in El Dorado County under the Selective Service Act of 1940 had climbed from 1,553 to 1,639 on Monday morning as the cards of the county men who had registered elsewhere were received at the headquarters of the county selective service board, Room 1, in the basement of the Placerville postoffice.

As the registration cards were received, they were assigned numbers and added to the list which was posted a week ago in the mail floor corridor of the postoffice.

The selective service board has received word that men who are registered for selective service may volunteer for one-year enlistment in the armed forces of the nation if they desire to do so.

Five who are registered under the conscription plan in the county have all ready volunteered, it was revealed. They are, Orval H. Fleming, James L. Boggs and Edward K. Whitney, who expressed a preference for service in the Navy; and George D. Feise and John L. Acuff, who expressed a preference for service in the land forces.

According to word received by the selective service board, men who are listed for conscription may apply to the board for the opportunity to volunteer for one year of service, and may express a preference as to which branch of the service they desire.

Forms for making such application are available at the board's offices and upon the filing of such application the applicants will be notified when and where to report for physical examination.

It is indicated that those who volunteer probably will have opportunity to enlist in their chosen branch of the service at the time the first quota is called for from the county under the conscription act.

CLOSE RESULT IN ELECTION INDICATED

Willkie-Roosevelt Race Is Likened To Contest Between Wilson, Rughes

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP) — Flanklin D. Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie hit their campaign peaks today as they entered the stretch period of the hardest fought presidential contest since 1916. In that year Woodrow Wilson defeated Charles Evans Hughes by the margin of a few late returns from California.

Coincident with the campaign windup, the capital is preparing for the grim business of another draft for military training, the first in our peace time history. The registration of 17,000,000 young men for military service, however, did not become a campaign issue because both President Roosevelt and Willkie endorsed compulsory service. The draft lottery takes place here tomorrow.

But the nation is flaming from coast to coast with dispute whether one or the other of the candidates would be less likely to lead the country into war. The thir dterm is another tremendous issue along with questions of more or less government regulation of business, spending, and the comparative ability of the two candidates to administer the vast business of government and to unify the effort to the nation for defense and economic advancement.

Class and racial voting blocs are judged to be acutely important. Labor is split wide open with President John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations backing Willkie and some of his own followers and most of the American Federation of Labor High Command either openly endorsing Mr. Roosevelt or obviously leaning toward him.

No recent presidential campaign is comparable to this one for week-before-election day indications of a close popular vote. Mr. Roosevelt swamped Alf. M. Landon four years ago by 27,476,000 votes to 16,-

Teachers Name New Officers

Miss Ursula Hogan Is President; Thanksgiving To Be Kept Nov. 21st

The annual teachers' institute at Sacramento will open Monday, November 18, and continue through Wednesday, November 20.

Thanksgiving Day will be observed on Thursday, November 21, and the day following will be a "trustees'" holiday.

This was the announcement of the county school schedule given Monday by County Superintendent K. W. McCoy following the joint teachers' association meeting and institute session held Thursday evening of last week at the Federated Church.

"The meeting will count as an institute session," the superintendent announced. "We usually have a half-day county meeting at the institute and our meeting last Thursday evening will take the place of that session. This will enable teachers to get away from the institute on Wednesday noon, November 20."

The teachers opened the meeting with a business session of the county teachers' association at which Miss Ursula Hogan, of Placerville Grammar School, was elected president, succeeding Robert Ramsey.

Mrs. Rose Corbell, of Blairs school, was elected vice-president; Mrs. Agnes Shinn, of Missouri Flat, secretary; and Mrs. Inez Bloom, of Sly Park, treasurer.

Teachers new to the county this year were introduced and Harry Wolf, of the high school faculty, reported on a study in arithmetic.

The meeting adjourned to dinner

Flying Trio End Chicago Trip

Pharmacist And Wife Spend Night In Sheep Camp As Doctor Shivers In Plane

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Robinson and Dr. D. W. Babcock returned Sunday in the doctor's five-passenger cabin monoplane from an air journey to Chicago during which Dr. Babcock spent several days attending a convention of physicians and surgeons.

According to Mr. Robinson who had never been out of the state before except, perhaps, on a Sunday drive into Nevada, the experience of traveling by air across so broad an expanse of territory was a real adventure and not entirely devoid of thrills.

One of these came on the trip home, after they had landed at the airport at Elko on Friday night.

Saturday, they attempted to continue to Reno and when low-lying clouds obscured the mountain tops ahead of them, they decided not to go on for radio communication with the Reno airport indicated that clouds were lying low and solidly over the airport. So, they decided it would be best to go back to Elko and await better weather.

But after they had turned about, they found that low-lying clouds had hemmed them in from the rear

SUTTER CREEK NIPS COUGARS

Invaders Play Power Game On Wet Field And Score Is 43 To 0; Sonora Next

The Cougars were badly outclassed by a heavier, more experienced team from Sutter Creek Saturday afternoon on the wet turf at Bennett Park, and the score was 43 to 0.

The wet field was of advantage to the weighty Sutter lads, who rolled up a total of six touchdowns and two safeties, which added to the three conversions, made up the impressive total.

Their superiority in the line accounted for most of their touchtowns, for the Thundering Herd piled up most of their points on smashes through the line and the power plays around the flanks. The two safeties resulted from two bad passes from center while deep in Cougar territory.

The band was there, despite the threatening weather; and the majorettes marched between the halves. The publicity department of the senior play, "Mistakes at the Blakes," put on a stunt at the half time.

A boy, Walter Dondero, carrying a bag marked "Fifty Thousand Dollars," and leading a large dog, paraded before the grandstand, displaying a large sign worded, "Mistakes at the Blakes," on one side, and "November 8" on the back.

A sizeable crowd of loyal supporters attended to root for the Cougars, and a much larger crowd is expected for the Homecoming game against Sonora on November 2. El Dorado High plans a real celebration for this event.

SCREW WORM CONTROL TO BE DEMONSTRATED ON TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Farmers of the county are being notified by the Farm Advisor's office of a demonstration in the control of screw worms which will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Lehman Brothers ranch, near Penobscot.

This is the second screw worm control demostration held in the county, a similar meeting having been held Thursday of last week at the Earl Colegrove ranch, in the Rescue district.

Any farmer having problems in screw worm control, and anyone else interested in the subject, is welcome to attend the demonstration meeting. The farm advisor's office reports that notices of the meeting were mailed to all whose names were available and that any who wish to attend the meeting should feel free to do so.

Survey Cuts Relief Load

Eligibility Review In Several Counties Calls For Re-Applications

SACRAMENTO — (UP) — A reduction of approximately 10 per cent in the state's relief case load was made possible through an eligibility review now under way in several counties, relief administrator S. G. Rubinow reported today.

The program is in progress in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Kern, Tulare, Fresno and San Joaquin counties. A similar review has been completed in Alameda county.

In each of the counties the entire case load is being suspended, a section at a time, Rubinow explained. To receive continued relief, each person or family head must make a reapplication and pass through the regular SRA intake procedures.

Those cases whose reapplications are rejected, and those which fail to reapply within 15 days of notification of suspension, are closed.

Of 11,086 cases automatically suspended in the eight counties, Rubinow expects nearly 40 per cent to be closed within a month. He said that in any given group of SRA approximately 30 per cent will be closed within a 30-day period, thus attributing 10 per cent of the reduction to the review.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Sledd, of Twin Bridges, are the parents of a daughter, Mary Lou, born at their residence on October 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Schleef, of Camino, are the parents of a son, Joseph Albert, born at the Sanatorium October 14th.

"SPRING FLOWERS"

SYNOPSIS

Peg Warrington has a theory that Adele Raymond's diffiidence and lack of personal charm is caused by lack of romance. She and Hank Raeburn plan to put the theory into practice, basing their campaign upon the assumption that Barret Gaynor, wealthiest and most attractive young man in town, has seen Adele sunning her beautiful hair in the garden and is enthralled by her loveliness. Of course, this is purest fabrication, but, as there is to be a dance at the country club, Hank arranges that Barret shall be Adele's escort. She is thrilled beyond words.

Peg selects Adele's frock and has a hairdresser attend her girl friend. The transformation is surprising—Adele is really beautiful. She has taken Peg's word about Barret being in love with her so seriously that Peg has misgivings.

He does not believe her when she confides in him that she never had a beau and never was kissed. Adele cannot understand Barret's remark, "I suppose you'll be telling me next that you fell in love with me on sight and had Peg ring me in as an escort," because Peg had told her Barret, himself, had done just that. Disappointed, she asks to go home.

Peg tries to help Adele, by telling Barret that Adele is in love with him. So the sophisticated Barret, believing that conquest will cure an infatuation, showers Adele with attention. It is when Adele admits her love for him and he answers, "I know. Peg told me. But isn't it about time you got over it?" that they realize the nature of Peg's plot.

Peg, frightened at the turn of events, refuses to admit that love scheme, with the result that she and her fiance break their engagement, and Barret goes to Europe. Adele is broken-hearted.

CHAPTER VI

And then one day in early spring, Adele's Aunt Mary came in the kitchen door with an armful of jonquils and daffodils and narcissus from the garden—holding them in her arm in the same position that Barret had held that great sheaf of roses. Somehow, that was the last straw. Adele took one look and fled. Through the house, to the front door, ready to open it and dash away—some place, any place.

She jerked the door open, ready to fling herself headlong down the steps—out the front gate—

And there stood Barret.

Adele thought she was seeing things. She shut her eyes tight and then opened them quickly. Still he was there. She shut them again and shook her head from side to side. Still he was there. Barret! But a different Barret. As hollow cheeked as she was. A new, quiet Barret. Older. Worn.

They stood there and stared at each other—the man in the carefully tailored suit that hung on him a little loosely and the girl in the gingham house dress. Just that. Stared and stared, with no change of expression on either love hungry face. Adele simply couldn't believe her eyes.

Everything seemed to stop, to hang for an eternity over a bottomless pit of time. And then Barret reached tweed-clad arms for her, took her, and held her, staring down into her eyes that stared back into his. Finally he spoke.

"Darling, can you ever, ever find it in your heart to forgive me?" he murmured.

"Forgive—YOU?" she wondered. "For what?"

And then his face did queer things. It twisted and writhed as he fought a strong man's tears. Adele, asking him what she had to forgive him! Adele—wan and pale and thin and worn from suffering he had caused her.

"Oh, darling!" he choked. "For being such a blind fool! For not recognizing the priceless treasure of your love. For being such an egotistic, conceited idiot! For leaving you! For—everything!"

And then, under his eyes a miracle happened. Leaning back against his arm so that she could look up into his face, that glorious inner glow that had been her greatest beauty the first time Barret Gaynor saw her, was turned on again. There, in his arms, in the space of a breath of time, a white, wan, spiritless girl began to glow again with the great pulsating beauty that is only one thing in the whole world. Love. Barret watched it happen—breathless. As one stares, unbelieving, at the snow flowers that have melted away the snow that they may lift their lovely faces to the sun. So was Adele lifting her face to him—blossoming again.

Adele felt every nerve within her begin to sing, like the singing wires Barret had mentioned that first night. Every tiny fiber of her being was vibrant, alive again, happy.

It was a long time before they had need for words, standing there, feasting their eyes upon the lovelight in each other's eyes. Finally—

"I worship you," said Barret in the same breath—like a duet. It seemed to be all they needed to say. But they had to say it over and over.

And after a while, Aunt Mary came in search of the open door that was chilling the house with its hospitality to the sharp spring breezes, and she found them there. Wordless, locked in each other's arms, staring into each other's eyes as if they could never stop staring.

"Well!" said Aunt Mary sharply, after she had closed the door. "This time you'll state your intentions in the very beginning, before you make our girl miserable again!"

"I'm glad to, Miss Raymond," said Barret, lifting his happy eyes for just long enough to say it. "They are strictly matrimonial. And very impatient intentions, too, my dear lady. I can't make this child my wife fast enough."

"Well! Um! Of course! Um!" stammered Aunt Mary, not knowing at all what she was saying. "You're—well! What an April Fool you turned out to be! I mean—Oh, I didn't mean—"

And she fled, the dear lady, in an agony of embarrassment.

Adele and Barret stared after her for a moment, shaking with delighted laughter. But they couldn't spare Aunt Mary their attention very long. Their world held only each other.

After a while they drove around to tell Hank their news, but Hank's mother said Hank was over at Peg's

"Oh, do you 'spose they've made up?" breathed Adele. "I'm so happy I can't bear to have anyone in the whole world unhappy. Especially Peg. And Hank. They really are mad about each other."

"Then you'll forgive Peg?" asked Barret.

"Oh, of course! It's been Peg who wouldn't forgive herself. Let's go over to Peg's. She'll be so much happier when she knows we are happy—"

They found Peg and Hank in each other's arms. And Peg was lovely with happiness, even through her tears. She tore herself out of Hank's arms to fling herself upon Adele.

"Oh, Adele, honey! Will you ever forgive me? I just couldn't bear it any longer! And when I saw in the New York paper that Barret was home from Europe, I just went to New York and told him the truth. Then we got into his car and I never rode so fast in my life! Honestly, Adele! I only did it to make you happy—and then I got scared —and when I had told one lie I had to tell a million more—"

"Don't think about it, Peg—" Adele tried to stop the other girl's flow of contrite words.

"—and then I was so ashamed that I couldn't make myself admit it. Till it finally dawned upon me that I'd admit anything, bear anything, promise anything—to get Hank back—"

"Gimme my girl!" demanded Hank with mock gruffness. "You have had her long enough."

They all laughed a little—tremulously, happily—as Peg spun from Adele's arms to Hank's, and Adele went just as fast into Barret's.

"Why don't we have a double wedding—right away?"

They never did know whose bright idea that was, but it was Adele who piped up—

"Oh, let's! The gardens are full of the loveliest spring flowers. We can have a yellow and white wedding. You know, there's something about spring flowers—"

She wanted to say that there was something about spring flowers that was akin to love. The dry heat of summer might wither them, the snows of winter cover them, but they came back with the spring. They never died. Neither did love—

But Barret couldn't spare her lips long enough to say all that. And they all know it, anyway—

WENDELL L. WILLKIE

The Story of A Country Boy Who Made Good and Why THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION Nominated him for PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Story begins in Elwood, Indiana, February, 18, 1892.

① Two Elwood neighbors were passing Herman Willkie's home. One of them said,-"Herm's got a new kid. He sure has got a husky pair of lungs. Should be able to make himself heard later on,-eh?"

② This youngster grew into a healthy rough and tumble boy,-inventor and leader in pranks. He never sought trouble. but if trouble overtook him he did not let it bluff him

④ Period of Growing Pains

Helped rebuild houses
Husked corn in Iowa
Worked as short-order cook
Harvest hand in wheat belt
Worked in Texas-Oil fields
And always a student

Tough jobs, but they made a man of the youngster who was not afraid to tackle them

⑤ Young Willkie became teacher of history in the Coffeyville, Kansas High School. He also acted as coach in athletics

In what year was the Dalton Gang's raid?
Who was the greatest baseball pitcher?
Who discovered Africa?
IMPORTANT COFFEYVILLE HISTORY

⑥ Ambitious to get ahead he took up the study of law in Indiana University. He walked off with honors and entered his Father's law offices. On the day the United States declared war he volunteered as a private. Came back a Captain

⑦ After his return from France Wendell Willkie hardly waited to get out of his uniform before he was after a job, for he had married Miss Edith Wilk. He landed a job as attorney for Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

⑧ His remarkable success in winning cases brought him a call from New York to head Commonwealth and Southern. His changes and innovations and his spectacular success which followed, amazed the industry ⑨ Instead of dismissing employees to meet diminishing returns, he hired more people to sell more electrical equipment, which would use more power, reduce the rates and in turn, create more jobs and, incidentally make some profits. It was as simple as that,-and it worked!

⑩ The first attempt to "stop Willkie" was when the New Deal High Command sent their toughest terror, Attorney General Robert Jackson, to take him apart at a Town Hall debate in New York. But Bob was the one flattened out and likewise was his presidential balloon ⑪ Willkie awoke next morning to find himself being looked over to head the biggest business in the world, the U.S.A.

⑫ It was the New Deal Administration that made Willkie. When they ganged up on him and, at the point of a gun, attempted to take his company which belonged to his thousands of stockholders, he fought,-and won! The Country learned about the man; his courage, ability and accomplishments. John Q. Public jumped to his feet-shouted,-"There is our man. Lets go and get him!"

THE SPIRIT OF 76

by JOHN CLINTON

Well, the old Hispano-Plymouth, my favorite trusty steed has just returned from the hospital with her wheels all lined up, her brakes relined, and 4 brand new Firestone Champions curled around her wheels. After 25,000 miles, I took 'er in for a check-up.

Was that all she needed? Yep! As you may have gathered from these dazed columns of mine—I use 76 and Triton. And while that may be no news flash to you—here's something you might be interested in.

They took the lid off the motor to check the carbon content, to see the rings, etc., etc. And she didn't need new rings, and she didn't need even a valve grind! Why? Well, the Hispano-Plymouth is a good car—mine's a '39. But—even the mechanic had to admit that Triton was largely responsible.

For after Mrs. Clinton got her back at Detroit and drove her lovingly out to the coast, she's had nothing in her crankcase (the Plymouth, not Mrs. C.) but Triton 20—and in the summer, Triton 30! And there's never been a ping in the whole 25 thousand miles.

You could do nothing better for your own buggy than to switch over to Triton. It forms so little carbon itself, that it allows your motor to reduce old carbon left by other oils. Of course if your car's never had anything but Triton in it (as in my case) why you just don't have any carbon trouble. So, try Triton will you? Tell 'em Clinton sent you in and see for yourself.

It might be well to have an R Day for all America—not just for the young men who must shoulder the rifles. For certainly all America, if this nation is to survive as a great power and as the world's greatest democracy, must get to work again — building America! And that means sweat and toil; that means hard work for wages, rather than a dole for idleness.

We cannot buy defense; there is no one to buy it from. But we can build it — brick by brick, stone by stone, just like our fathers built it before us.

If we are to spend billions for defense, then we must either earn more billions or cut down our standard of living. We cannot vote billions; we have to produce them.

There is nothing wrong with either the American worked or the American employer that common sense and a new birth of patriotism won't cure. There is nothing wrong with American government that can't be cured by sound leadership.

to the reckless driving charge.

According to officials, Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Pearce and their daughter were driving easterly on Route 50 about three hundred yards west of Merrymans when their car was struck by the westbound car driven by Charles and occupied by the other two, which, it is charged, was at least partially on the wrong side of the road.

All three occupants of the car were removed to the Sanatorium and Mrs. Pearce and the child were permitted to go home after emergency treatment. Mrs. Pearce suffered general bruises and cuts on the arms and legs. The child had a bad scalp wound.

Mr. Pearce's injuries consisted of a severe scalp laceration with a possible concussion. He remained a patient at the hospital through the weekend and Monday morning his condition was reported as very good.

and Dr. Babcock reported to Elko by radio that he was going to land.

"O. K." answered the Elko operator, "when you get down let me hear from you so that I'll know you're all right."

Well, that was easier said than done. The doctor landed the plane near the cabin of a couple of Basque sheepherders, somewhere west of Battle Mountain, Nevada. The sheepherders had no transportation, except maybe a mule and the nearest ranch house, Mr. Robinson gathered, was about twenty miles away and the nearest town was fifty miles distant.

On the grounds, Dr. Babcock was unable to communicate by radio with Elko.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson spent Saturday night in the cabin of the Basque sheepherders, and the doctor, fearful that a sudden gust of wind might upset the plane, stayed with the ship all night to do what he could in such an eventuality.

Came the dawn, and they took off again in better weather and reached home safely.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

Let us turn from war and politics to two lighter books, one that produces a smile and the other a chuckle. For the smile, we turn to the book that heads the current best seller fiction list in the United States — "Mrs. Miniver," by Jan Struther, a writer who is new to Americans. It is a smallish book, made up of thirty-six sketches or essays which originally appeared in the London Times. They are just faintly reminiscent of the "Provincial Lady" but they have more finesse and delicacy.

Who is Jan Struther whose book has zoomed to the head of the best seller list in such a short time? In private life, she is Mrs. Maxtone Graham, she is thirty-nine years old (writers can't possibly keep their age a secret), and she is pretty. Like her Mrs. Miniver she is the mother of three children. Her husband, a Scotsman, is at present in service, her oldest son is at school in England. With her other two children, Jan Struther is spending the winter in the United States.

"Mrs. Minerver," which deals with the comings and goings of family life, is an attempt, and a successful one, to keep the pleasant side of existence uppermost when there is so much today to overshadow it. The charm of the sketch lies in Jan Struther's ability to capture and express those little fleeting thoughts that most of us feel but are never quite able to put into words and to make our own.

Take "In Search of a Charwoman," which is a reflection on people. The Lane-Pontifexes are coming to dinner. They are decent and intelligent. He is well-informed, she is nice looking and agreeable, but when you are with them, you feel, says Mrs. Miniver, as though someone was continually shutting windows. Then she goes on to compare them to people who are merry, wise, or comforting "whose presence heartens the spirit or kindles the mind," the people who open windows instead of shutting them. And suddenly you find that Mrs. Miniver has clarified your ideas about some of your own friends.

Jan Struther has that most endearing quality, that she confers upon someone in her book, the charwoman, we think — a zest for life. We suspect that one of the secrets of her success lies in her power to use the words of the Clubwoman's Collect "to reach to the great woman's heart of us all." Smile with Mrs. Miniver.

For a chuckle, we turn to the McKenneys, The McKenneys are "folks." They beling to that happy confident majority who make up the bulk of our American life. "The McKenneys Carry On" is a continuation of the exploits of those two adventurous sisters which began in "My Sister Eileen," by Ruth McKenney.

Ruth McKenney depends almost entirely upon the familiar scene for her laughs. If you haven't a pair of McKenneys in your own home, your neighbors have, or you had schoolmates who were their spitting image. The household in Ohio that Ruth and Eileen gladden and madden by turns with their Hibernian enthusiasm has a counterpart in pretty much every other state in the Union.

In the variety of entertainment that the 14 sketches present, you are reminded of old-time vaudeville. A lament for Bones, "the Lon Chaney of the dog world" whom the sisters cherished against home opposition, is followed by an exposition on feminine strategy which relates how the giant-sized, overstuffed McKenneys put one over on a fairy-like little cousin whom they cordially hated.

Valentine's Day played an important part in the lives of the sisters Eileen who had a way with the lads always came off with the honor of having received the most Valentines. Ruth somehow didn't register with the other sex. Being chosen class orator was a hollow triumph for Ruth—her real achievement was the capture of the captain of the football team for the Senior Prom and impressing him with her "snappy line." That was true compensation for one who had heretofore been renowned for her brains rather than for her beauty.

If you are tired of subtlety, ribaldry or whimsy in your humor, try "The McKenneys Carry On." It is good straight American fun.

The position of Turkey and Soviet Russia was unclear, but Greeks were hopeful of support. At Istanbul, it was officially stated that Turkey was not yet in the war but was ready to defend itself.

The Axis powers struck through Greece (in an effort to get at the British navy in the eastern Mediterranean) after charging the Greeks with aiding British naval operations and demanding permission to establish Italian bases in Greece. The fascist ultimatum was rejected and a few hours later the war was in progress in a new field.

"BOOM TOWN" CLOSES ON SCREEN AT EMPIRE TUESDAY

The biggest parcel of exciting, thrilling action, played by the greatest cast delivered to a theatre audience in many a year, opened yesterday at the Empire Theatre. The picture is "Boom Town," and the action booms from beginning to end. The film will be shown again tonight and Tuesday in response to popular request.

Some of the most amazing scenes the screen has ever exhibited are seen in this picture which is sure-fire, recommended entertainment for everyone.

Not only does Boom Town" give audiences fast action, but it parades a cast which is almost unbelievable in popularity. Stars of the picture are Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr. And as though that were not enough there are Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, Chill Wills, Marion Martin, Minna Gombell, and a few more, ending with wee Casey Johnson and Baby Quintanilla.

The story cannot be told briefly, but is it the story of two pals who battle together, become enemies, are reunited and arrive at a pulsating climax and when one of them must take a long gamble to send his friend away from a siren back to his wife — the girl they both love.

679,000, and in 1932 polled 22,821,000 to 15,761,000 for Herbert C. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover gave Alfred E. Smith a classic beating in 1928, 21,392,000 to 15,016,000. John W. Davis' lost cause in 1924 polled 8,385,000 votes to 15,725,000 for Calvin Cooledge and the 1920 count was: Harding, 16,152,000; Cox, 9,147,000.

But 24 years ago it was a horse race: Wilson, 9,129,000 and Hughes 8,538,000. It was not until a full day after the polls closed that belated returns from California shifted that state from Hughes to Wilson, giving the former the election by 227 electoral votes to 254.

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE SEPTEMBER RECORD REPORTED

One of the highest monthly placement records ever made by the State Department of Employment was recorded in September of this year, according to announcement made today by Ford Park, manager of the Placerville department office.

Placements for the month totaled 28,208 against 27,021 for August of this year, an increase of 4.44 per cent, and against 26,963 for September, 1939, an increase of 4.6 per cent, Park said.

The Department's active file, that is, persons who are registered for work with the department, dropped 10.4 per cent, from 436,745 in August, to 391,447 in September.

In the Placerville office, placements for September, 1940, totaled 32, against 28 for August, and 9 for September, 1939.

In the unemployment compensation field, a state-wide total of 315,880 checks were distributed to eligile workers during September of this year, amounting to $4,414,857. This compared favorably with 370,685 checks written in August of this year, for a total distribution of $5,135,057, indicating that increased employment had taken up some of the slack, Park stated.

In Placerville area, a total of 865 checks were written in September, 1940, and $13,758 distributed to unemployment workers here.
